AFTER-THOUGHTS

There are always certain high lights at a gathering, such as the Industrial Luncheon on Wednesday that a news account fails to include. Usually a man goes away from these functions full of food but in this case although the food was abundant and delectable, we departed with a few thoughts.

OPPORTUNITIES EXIST

The argument was advanced by Frederick J. Koster, San Francisco manufacturer and principal speaker of the occasion, that the day of individual opportunity is not past and that is not necessary to resent our people or our industries. He cited the example of a man in his own plan to prove his point. This man, a laborer, has two sons, one of whom has worked his way through college and now occupies a responsible position in the local Standard Oil refinery. The other also is securing an education through his own initiative and endeavor, and a good position awaits him upon graduation.

Particularly impressive was that portion of Mr. Koster's address in which he told of the relations existing between himself and his men. "I have often said to them," he declared, "that they are not my employees, but that we are all banding together, working for the good and wellbeing of one another."

HITS HAPPY NOTE

Tom Carlson hit a happy note when he stressed the value of teamwork in a community. In touching on the labor disturbances of last summer in San Francisco and the attempt to carry them to our own waterfront, he told of a meeting held in the city hall to discuss the situation here, and the unreserved co-operation extended by representatives of union labor, with the result that the agitators made no headway and Richmond remained free of industrial strife. He thus emphasized the vital principle that all elements in a community, of necessity, are interested in its progress and on their co-operation or lack of it depends whether we go

LOST S. O. FLIERS ARE FOUND DEAD

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 10—UP—Two bodies had been recovered and a third reported sighted tonight on bleak Stansbury Island in the Great Salt Lake as the climax of a five-day search for three missing Standard Oil Company aviators and their 12-passenger airliner which disappeared early Sunday.

The first body, that of Mechanic George O. Anderson, Alameda, Calif., was taken from the briny water last night and identified today. The second was that of Pilot R. S. Allen, which was found today, although sighted from the air late yesterday.

A searching party was scouring the shoreline of the island tonight to find the body of G. A. Lenz, co-pilot, after an airplane observer reported that an object had been seen in the water near the island, 35 miles west of here. No trace of the spacious airship has been found, although oil company officials reason that it is submerged in the lake some where in the vicinity of the island. Ten boats are dragging the shallow waters while planes drone overhead seeking the lost airliner.

NEW ARMY OF ETHIOPIANS IS PREPARED

Transportation is now being effected easily with the most advanced outposts over new roads, and it is feared that within a short time sufficient material will have been concentrated at the new base in Addis Ababa to justify the general staff ordering the advance through the lake zone valley.

ADVANCE CONTINUES

ROME, Oct. 11 (AP)—General Ruggieri's forces tonight continued to advance southward in the direction of Makale, beyond Addis Ababa, Italian press messages from Addis Ababa said.

The Italian press messages were falling back steadily under continuing pressure of the Italians but were harassing the Italian right flank near Addis Ababa. These Ethiopian contingents are part of the command of Ras Seyoum, and occupy strong mountain positions to kilometers northwest of Addis Ababa.

The Italian contingent planes have mapped the Ethiopian positions.

General Maravigna's army corps pushed its front line positions two kilometers further south during today's fighting as part of a plan to continue encircling the Ethiopian forces by attacking the holy city of Addis Ababa, which still was in Ethiopian hands late today.

Vineyardist Is Stricken During Market Hearing

PRESNO, Oct. 10 (AP)—M. J. Keiser, San Joaquin vineyardist, died today, apparently victim of a heart attack at the opening session of a public hearing on proposed new raisin marketing agreement.

Attempts to revive him by members of the audience and the medical squad of the Fresno hospital failed. The hearing was held in Keiser's home.

A. S. Strickland, chairman of the raisin growers' committee of 119, told the growers that only that a co-operative plan could a fair crop price be attained.

He indicated the committee believed a profitable price could be maintained throughout the year by the pooling of 50 percent of each grower's crop, and the judicial marketing of the pool by the raisin control board.

Failure of last year's agreement to increase prices materially was apparently considered due to lack of grower cooperation.

County Charity Bill Is Staggering Sum

County taxpayers will be called upon to meet an unparalleled sum this coming year to care for the county's unfortunate and needy, according to the findings of the Contra Costa County Division of California Taxpayers' Association. An expenditure program that contemplates the sum of $675,000 for county charities is slated for the fiscal year of 1935-36, which may pyramid close to three quarters of a million dollars before the new fiscal year is over, June 30, 1936, the Association report states. Last year the sum of $565,000 was budgeted for charities ten years ago, but $200,000 was needed.

PENSIONS INCREASE COST

Changes in the state old age pension law, which went into effect this year is the outstanding factor toward the increase of county charity costs the association points out. This year the sum of $187,000 has been set aside for the purpose, as against $50,000 last year. It is this increased expense that is worrying the Board of Supervisors, and O. S. Liverize, social welfare director, lacking previous expenditure history as a guide, the new law has made it extremely difficult to precisely determine the exact sum of money needed to finance this cost. Judging by the number of applicants for old age pensions at present, the outlook is that the demand upon the county treasury will soar beyond the present reserve of $187,000.

STAGGERING SUM

The association report gives in detail the various functions of charity necessary in this county at public expense. The extent of it, and the increasing sum needed for the purpose are almost beyond belief for a county of this size, the association declares.

Featuring these costs are: Care of the aged needy, $182,000; indigent relief, $152,000; Tuberculosis patients at Welmar sanatorium, $2,700; Care of indigent patients at county hospital, $121,000; Care of orphans, $75,500; Sunshine Camp and county health clubs, $25,000; Care of needy blind $13,000.

BUDGETS SCRUTINIZED

Rigid scrutiny of budgets and successful planning with the view of minimizing these costs feature the recent budget hearings, and yet the total sum needed to care for the county's needy has leaped to new heights all of which the taxpayers of the county will be called upon to pay.

"This is a cost which cannot be questioned too closely, for it is the cost of human misery," the association report states. "This rising cost is a levy every taxpayer should be willing to face fully and bravely, and be happy in the thought that through the medium of his tax bill he is aiding others far less fortunate." declares E. L. DeLuccia, head of the Taxpayers' Association, today.

"Compared to ten years ago, the cost of county charity today is staggering," the association declares. "It vividly reflects in our minds the extent of the depression, because these figures are brought clearly home to us recorded as they are in the county tax bill." "If we can only get a change in present economic conditions, these costs will fall."

SUPERVISORS PAID

The Association's report extends high praise to the Board of Supervisors and all county officials for the valiant effort they made to offset the uncontrolled costs of charity. Mindful of the marked step up in county assessed valuations for 1935-1936, which warranted a sharp decline in the county rate, the association comments upon the efforts of the Supervisors to meet the most unsummarizable obligation to pay the costs of general county government and give the taxpayers of the county all the relief possible in the amount of tax to be paid this year.

How well they succeeded in meeting the handicaps is evidenced by the following: For 1934-35 county taxpayers were called upon to pay $1,161,397, in taxes for the operations of the county. For 1935-36 tax bills will aggregate $1,162 for the same purposes, a nominal increase of but $50,000 and with a decline of 13 cents in the rate. This year it is $1.12.

Flow of Tears Will Usually Remove Foreign Particle From the Eye

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

THE most common eye injury is due to some foreign particle entering the eye. If it falls on the surface of the eyeball and is not immediately removed, it is picked up by the lids from which it can usually be easily removed. If under the upper lid, lifting up the lid discloses the offending object; if under the lower lid, it can be pulled down. If it is hidden by the loose folds of the lid, it is often difficult to find and causes much irritation. The free flow of tears will usually wash it out. If not it can often be brushed off with a clean cloth or a bit of cotton. If it can be found, if this "something in the eye" can not be removed, the eye should be covered with a bandage until help can be obtained.

Another common and often serious injury is that caused by a flame or jet of steam, hot water, or frying fat particles while cooking. If at all severe medical attention should be sought to avoid infection and scars, which may seriously interfere with the sight of the eye. Particles of mortar or lime may burn severely. The eye should be bathed at once to remove the particle and then flushed with weak vinegar.

Acid burns can be checked by using a solution of baking soda. In both instances the eye should be irrigated with warm boric acid solution. Cold applications are indicated in most injuries to the eyes, this to be followed by washing with a boric acid solution and covering with a light clean gauze.

Rest Best Cure

Rest is the best cure for an injured inflamed area. The eye is a restless organ and will not remain still of its own accord; so, in order to keep it quiet, a soft bandage should be placed over it to prevent motion. If not swollen and inflamed a pad may be placed over the eye. A little clean vaseline may be applied to the pad to prevent sticking.

It may be necessary to cover both eyes in order to hold the one still. When one eye is injured, the other eye should be bandaged as well for work and reading as little as possible, because it puts too much strain on the good eye. As they both work together, also puts a strain on the injured eye.

Cold compresses should be used during the first twenty-four hours after an injury or the beginning of an acute inflammation. It relieves the congestion and keeps down the swelling. The compress should lie on the back of the eye and the clean gauze or cloth wrung out of cold water. Cold on a piece of ice and changed as often as necessary.

Children or old folks hot compresses may be used instead. They reduce the inflammation and relieve pain. They are applied the same as the cold and should be soaked in hot water every few minutes.

In conjunctivitis and styes they give very great relief. In inflammations, especially when there is much watering of the eye or a purulent discharge, irrigation is of great benefit. A teaspoonful of common salt to a pint of warm water allowed to cool, are good safe solutions to use.

Should Favor Eye

The patient should lie on his back with head turned to the side of the inflamed eye, so that the solution does not run across the nose to the other eye. A wad of clean cotton is saturated with the solution, which is allowed to run into the eye as the lids are held open. A dish or cup can be placed so as to catch the water as it flows off the eye. This must not be used again and again, care should be taken that the water should be used for each eye.

The use of an eye cup containing the warm solution is often very successful and is easy to use if the patient is able to be up. The opening and closing of the eyelid while in the solution washes it very nicely. If the discharge isummy and sticky and the lid borders stick together overnight washing them with warm water and then applying a boric acid salve to the lid margins will prevent this.

Blows over the eye may cause rupture of the eyeball or break blood vessels in the eyeball, causing the white part to turn red. These all may be very serious. In any injury or inflammation of the eye that does not improve rapidly a good eye specialist should be visited at once.

Guide to Charm

Making Own Cosmetics Is Often Useful

By JACQUELINE HUNT

EVERY woman at some time or other is excited at the prospect of making her own cosmetics. Certainly it is fun to do things for yourself occasionally even though you can afford the best on the market. But you should understand that there is little economy in making cosmetics at home.

Even the simplest cold cream, for instance, calls for at least half a dozen ingredients, some of them quite expensive. And even the simplest formulas require considerable time and trouble in the mixing. However, if you feel that the satisfaction is worth what it costs, here are some recipes that can be prepared at home with a degree of success.

Cold Cream.—This cream can be used for cleansing or nourishing. Melt together in the top of a double boiler, one ounce each of white wax, spermaceti, lanoline. When the oils are hot and thoroughly blended, remove from the fire and beat the mixture vigorously with a rotary egg beater, adding rose water a drop at a time until the cream reaches the right consistency. Honey a drop or two of your favorite perfume should also be added. Pour into sterilized jars and keep in a cold place until used.

Muscle Oil.—Heat and blend thoroughly, one ounce pure olive oil, one-half ounce odorless castor oil and 5 drops of pine oil. The pine oil is gently astringent and gives the mixture a pleasant odor. Heat the oil each time before using. This may be mixed in greater quantities if you find it satisfactorily cleansed.

Astringent.—Put into a large bottle, four ounces orange flower water, two ounces witch hazel, one tablespoon saturate solution boric acid and one teaspoon tincture benzoin. Shake well each time before using as the mixture may tend to separate. Keep the skin saturated with this lotion for five minutes after it has been thoroughly cleansed.

Shampoo for Oily Hair.—Melt a shredded cake of pure castile soap in one pint water, keeping the mixture in a warm place. Strain the jelly and when slightly cool, beat in two tablespoons alcohol, four tablespoons bay rum and one-fourth teaspoon powdered borax. Keep in a cool place until you are ready to use.

One-third to one-half of this mixture should be used for each shampoo, depending on the length and thickness of your hair. Divide the mixture and add that you expect to use to a well-beaten egg. Rinse the hair carefully in clear water until free from the soapy lather. Have lemon juice or vinegar added to the last rinse water.

Bleaching Mask.—This should be mixed fresh each time you use it. Blend two tablespoons fine oatmeal, two tablespoons almond meal, two tablespoons rose water, four tablespoons glycerine and the strained juice of a lemon. Cleanse the skin thoroughly before using.

Admiral Sims Still Turns the Phrase

By TALBOT LAKE

ADMIRAL SIMS has always been considered an alert, capable officer who was not afraid to speak his mind. Lately the Admiral has been saying that the naval morale has been declining and that the officers of the navy regime are "notoriously inefficient."

Admiral William Snowden Sims well earned the reputation of putting words into terse phrases, and his latest sally holds up the idea of a "rotary egg beater" adding rose water a drop at a time until the cream reaches the right consistency.

A Canadian by birth—Port Hope, Ontario, 1858—Admiral Sims was appointed to the Naval Academy from Pennsylvania; was graduated with honors in 1880. His long experience in the service, from which he retired for age in 1922, involves attachments to European embassies and duty in practically all far-flung waters and stations.

President of the Naval War College at Newport, Rhode Island, he commanded American naval operations in European waters until the end of the conflict, when he returned to duty at the War College. Holder of illustrious orders from most of the leading nations of the world, he has as tributes to his scholarly accomplishments doctor's degrees from Yale, Harvard, Tufts, Juniata, Cambridge (England), McGill (Canada) and various other institutions of higher learning.

Guarding Against Fleas

To guard against flea infestation of dwellings, animal pets should be frequently dusted with any insect powder made from dried pyrethrum flowers. This is harmless to animals and human beings. If a house becomes infested the rugs, cracks in floor and other likely breeding places should be sprayed thoroughly with any of the liquid spray insecticides. The various special flea powders made from derris or cube plants are also very effective in combating fleas.

MILITARY NOTE

The girl who has the most forenoon the pleasure of a "bathing" tub bath in the evening in order to get to her other beauty treatments should try combining them. It is possible to complete your beauty routine while you are sitting in your warm, relaxing tub.

First make or buy a shelf that fits across the top of your tub in front of you. On this place a hand mirror your cleansing cream and tissues, small pads of cotton and skin freshener or astringent. Brush your hair and bind it out of the way, then get into your tub and go through your regular routine.

One night each week you might arrange your manicure gadgets on the shelf and have a careful manicure. Shape your nails before you get them wet, then by the time you have completed your bath, the articles will be soft and ready for treatment. Apply polish after you get out of the tub and the hands and nails are thoroughly dry.

Greek Draperies Favored By the Fashion Experts

By IRENE VAIL

NEW YORK—Those who had the privilege of viewing models worn by the mannequins are more enthusiastic over Greek draperies and pleats than about anything else. Naturally, we are not expected to appear in faithful copies of the robes worn by Grecian ladies of elegant luxury, but we are allowed to adopt their grace for our moments of leisure after six, in short.

The more active hours of the day the Russian colors, styles, and fabrics seem to be best liked. There is no estimating the amount of Persian lamb that is being used just now. This of all furs seems to be most popular.

Generally speaking, the vogue for a slim daytime silhouette, achieved both in one- and two-piece effects, for belts, for high necklines—not stopping at the base of the throat either—and for longer sleeves.

The season is getting under way in black, dresses enlivened by red or metal belts, in gray with one or both of these accessories.

Costume jewelry reaches a new high. The draped high neckline calls for a necklace, cord or some effective treatment.

The most forceful influence felt is, of course, the Renaissance (Italian), but there is no denying that the military note sounds strong and clear from fashion's strongholds. It has even seemed to younger crowd who are important always, but particularly so now when they are being outfitted for their trip back to school. Braids galore, military emblems, trousers and all sorts of hats borrowed from every army under the sun, irrespective of sympathy, are some of the ways that fashion plays soldier.

Good Serving Makes Meal Outstanding

By JUDITH WILSON

WE ALL know how much fun it is to have lunch at the town's most popular tea room occasionally. Why? The food is rarely unusual. It is the attractive manner in which it is served, the garnishes, and other unusual touches.

Any homemaker can add zest to her menus with a dash of imagination and the adaptation of some of the tricks of tea room cookery. A tasty first course, a colorful garnish, a dainty salad or an unusual dessert can make a meal so charming that you need not mind if an unexpected guest drops in.

Here are recipes for some of the "extras" that appeared in yesterday's menus:

LUNCHEONS
Rainbow Fruit Cup
Corn Omelet
Cheese Biscuits
Angel Cake with Banana Frosting
Tea with Lemon

Tomato Juice with Souffled Crackers
Savory Lima Bean Casserole
Mixed Green Salad
Hot Rolls
Crab-apple Jelly
Coffee

Cheese Balls
Work 1 cup nippy cheese or grated American cheese and 1 tablespoon prepared mustard into tiny balls about 1/2 inch in diameter. Roll in well-salted cooked rice, pressing firmly so the grains adhere and the ball is compact. Fry in deep fat until golden brown. Serve on toothpicks with cocktails or drop into bowls of hot soup.

Frozen Apple Sauce
Make a thick apple sauce and sweeten to taste. Mix 1 cup apple sauce with 1/2 teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg, 1 teaspoon melted butter, the juice of 1/2 lemon, and 2 tablespoons syrup from preserved ginger. Chill and fold in 1 cup stiffly whipped cream. Freeze in salt and ice or in the tray of a mechanical refrigerator. Garnish with chopped preserved ginger.

Gingerbread Waffles
Beat 3 eggs until light, add 1/4 cup sugar, 1/2 cup molasses and 1 cup sour milk. Sift together 1 1/2 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon each ginger, baking powder and soda. Add to the first mixture, then add 1/3 cup melted butter and beat until smooth. Bake on a waffle iron that is not too hot. Serve at once topped with the frozen apple sauce cream.

Spaghetti Breads
When making a macaroni or spaghetti dish, keep aside several pieces. Keep it in cold water until needed. When serving a consommé or bouillon, snip the pieces of macaroni into 1/4-inch pieces and add to the hot soup.

Glazed Bananna Halves
This makes an attractive garnish for baked ham, roast beef or lamb. Cut 3 bananas in halves lengthwise. Place in a baking dish cut side down. Beat 1/2 cup strawberry jelly with a fork and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Spread on the bananas. Bake uncovered in a hot oven for 20 minutes, basting occasionally.

Souffled Crackers
Soak the old-fashioned soda

crackers in cold water for 8 minutes. Dot with butter and bake in a very hot oven until puffed, then reduce the heat until the crackers are browned. If you wish, sprinkle the crackers with grated cheese or paprika before baking. Good with tomato juice or salads.

Some Marriages Started On a Shoe String Really Do Succeed

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

THERE is something commendable about starting a business venture on a shoe string, but no sane-minded person could give three loud cheers for a marriage that was started that way. Yet some marriages have succeeded. It is impossible to give any set sum required to set up housekeeping, but the main thing is to have enough money coming in to keep the house after it is started. Different localities require different amounts. It is not always true that living in small towns costs less than living in great cities. Some small towns come high. Rents are comparable to city rents. Food is higher, and the scale of living also.

Everybody owns a car in most of these towns, so, of course, the newlyweds must have one too in order to keep up with the crowd. One may do away with a good deal of this nonsense in big cities. In the biggest of them it's possible to live pretty much as one likes without a car.

"Dear Mrs. Martin: How much money do you think a man should have saved before he can marry? I have been engaged to a girl for a year now and we want to marry as soon as possible. I only have $500, but I am sure of my job as any one can be and am getting $35 a week. The girl I am engaged to has a job and makes $18. I do not mind her keeping her job, but she seems to think she shouldn't. She hasn't any money saved, and I don't want to live with her parents, which she wants to do. Could we marry, do you think? I am twenty-six and want to have a home."

—Fred K.

Several days later a frantic Bobby wanted to know what had happened to his "lucky stone."

"And who threw away my movie star pictures?" he wailed accusingly. His mother faced him calmly. "I'm surprised, Bobby, that you should cry over such worthless trash. There are millions of stones like the one you had. And as for those cards, they were dirty and unsanitary. They weren't either," he contradicted. "I was saving them up. You shouldn't."

"You have so many lovely toys, Bobby. And when the boy would not stop crying, 'Maybe I shouldn't have thrown them away, Bobbie. I did not think that it would matter so much to you. Here's a quarter. Will that settle it?' Bobby took the quarter finally, but he was far from being consoled.

By instinct every child is a collector. At first he is guided by whim. In time he will confine himself to particular "fields," as Bobby is beginning to do. And gradually, if the impulse is not thwarted, he may arrive at a real and worthwhile hobby through collecting.

If you don't like his pockets bulging with junk, provide a box to store it in. Respect the fact that he finds it worthwhile saving.

PENALIZING BUSINESS

In the past year or two it has become a rather popular pastime to picture business as a robor baron, indifferent to human rights and only concerned with the grabbing of profits. Men in high authority are mainly to blame for the feeling, as they have advocated laws which, if enacted and enforced, would destroy our industrial foundations. I do not hold that business is always right and that its methods are above scrutiny, criticism and correction. It is responsible for abuses, without question, and when it arrogates to itself the right to transcend the law and the code of justice, it should be called to account. On the other hand it is a source through which our employment and conveniences come and while it may be necessary to regulate it in some particulars, it is the height of folly to tear down the foundation of our economic structure.

One of the speakers in expressing these thoughts most appropriately cited as an example of human understanding industry, one which had due regard for the rights of the men who worked for it and real interest in their welfare, the company under whose roof the gathering was being held—which was about as nice and sincere a compliment as could be paid to any corporation. It was P. M. Sanford, who gave utterance to these words of praise.

ALL FOR ALL

There were over 200 men and one woman present at that luncheon. I looked them over very carefully and sized them as best as my judgment of human nature allows. Not a one of them, including the speakers, looked like a slave driver, a tyrant, or the despoiler of the rights of their fellowmen. Rather the thought was deeply impressed upon me that here was a representative gathering, imbued with one solemn idea, the encouragement of those ideas which make a city industrially great. With that objective constantly in mind there is no question but the goal will ultimately be reached and the resultant prosperity will be diffused among all of us.

Persons in this neighborhood desiring to attend the Townsend Club national convention in Chicago, October 24th to 27th, will have the advantage of special low round trip passenger fares from points on the Southern Pacific. It was announced by the company. The announcement stated the low fares will apply for first class, tourist and coach travel accommodations.

spokesman meant Italy would endeavor to break a naval blockade of her seaports, if one should be laid.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy almost blocked the sanctions committee by a technicality. He pointed out the resolution constituting the committee needed unanimous approval under the covenant.

AMEND RESOLUTION

Assembly President Edouard Benes of Czechoslovakia quickly altered the resolution to read "a invitation to members of the League to join a committee."

League officials said they expected a maximum of 20 nations would join. Italy, Austria, Hungary and possibly Albania and one unnamed country were counted as holdouts.

The committee, which has the duty of deciding upon specific penalties and of coordinating international punishment of Italy, will include Britain, France, Russia and the major powers of the council.

and most of the small countries who depend upon the League for protection and who have representation only in the Assembly.

OTLAWS ITALY

The committee of six report, which "outlawed" Italy as an unprovoked attacker of Ethiopia, was approved by 52 nations of the Assembly. Austria and Hungary voted against it because of their "friendship" with Italy, and Italy was one of the disputants—was not permitted to vote.

Aloisi, defying the League's ability to abolish war, made a strenuous effort to delay procedure, but was overruled by Benes.

person's body. Soon after, W. C. Ware, an airplane observer, reported a body on the island beach. It was not until today that searchers realized that two bodies had been sighted.

IDENTIFY CORPSE

Hugh L. Thomas, United Press staff correspondent, was in the air beating party to reach the second body today, that of Allen. He identified the experienced pilot from a gold ring, inscribed "R. S. A."

American, an employee of the company for only one week, was not identified until today in the morning at Toole, 15 miles from the lake. Both bodies were badly damaged and heavily encrusted with salt, indicating that the men had probably escaped from the plane, removed their clothing and attempted to swim to shore.

The giant plane met disaster early Sunday while enroute from Alameda to Salt Lake City. Flying high and fast, the crew battled for weather conditions and was never heard from again. The theory has been advanced that the pilot, seeking the airport, nosed down too sharply and crashed into the lake.

Since the airplane is all white, and the lake bottom is white with salt, finding the wreckage is proving exceedingly difficult.

KING WILL TAKE THRONE NOVEMBER 3

King's acceptance of the commission to form a cabinet climaxed a morning of rapid developments. When four generals visited Tsaldaris and demanded an immediate restoration of the monarchy by a decree approved by the National Assembly.

KING IS HAILED

While the generals were interviewed, Tsaldaris, Royalists demonstrated in the streets, and in the barracks soldiers hung portraits of King George on the walls amid shouts.

"Long live King George! We proclaim him our ruler!"

Shortly afterward Tsaldaris called his cabinet in special meeting and announced that his government had resigned "in consequence of insistent demands, to which I am opposed, for restoration of the monarchy this afternoon, with or without the approval of the National Assembly."

PRESIDENT QUILTS

The military committee which visited Tsaldaris included General Papagos, commander of the first military corps; General Repas, commander of the air forces and Admiral Ecumenis, chief of the general naval staff.

President Alexander Zamilis of the republic resigned and ex-King George was asked to hasten to Athens by airplane from London. Pending the King's arrival it was announced that Korydis has undertaken the post of regent for him.

MUCH REJOICING

In announcing martial law, the revolutionary committee issued a declaration asserting that "because of the imminent danger of anarchy we have considered it our sacred duty to intervene."

Military posts throughout the Athens area greeted news that the King had been asked to return with salvoes of artillery. All public buildings were occupied by soldiers with fixed bayonets. Sentries were posted at post and telegraph offices but service was not disturbed.

U. S. READY TO AID IN SANCTIONS

(initially more important than trade with the belligerents.)

Hull's statement was an appeal to American business to heed the warning contained in President Roosevelt's statement of policy, issued simultaneously with his embargo on the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war to either Italy or Ethiopia. The President warned Americans that if they attempted any financial or commercial transactions with either Italy or Ethiopia they must assume the risks and liabilities incurred. In effect the President drew the protection of the American government from all trade with the belligerents.

MUM ON LEAGUE

Hull did not specifically mention the League of Nations or the sanctions which that body proposes to levy against Italy. There could be no doubt, however, that he had such penalties in mind when he issued his statement. The League proposes in its sanctions to ban all trade, financial, commercial and social relationships between Italy and the rest of the world.

Hull, in his statement, said: "The language of the President's statement has a thoroughly well defined meaning, and every person should be able to grasp its meaning and its implications. Technically, of course, there is no legal prohibition apart from the proclamation governing the export of arms—against our people entering into transactions with the belligerents."
